

MDEM Succession Planning Programme 2022

Programme information

Succession planning is a crucial element of good governance and MDEM's Organisational Health Check 2020/21 highlights succession planning as a key developmental need for many museums.

- Have you considered how the board will manage if one of the trustees decides to leave?
- Has the Covid-19 pandemic highlighted gaps on your board and the need for new expertise and experiences?
- Do you know which skills, experience and attitudes are required to enable your museum to flourish and be sustainable?
- Have you thought about the representation on your board, does it reflect a range of views, viewpoints and your audiences?
- Are you fully up to date with your governing document and the rules and terms of office for trustees?

This MDEM short programme will support museums to consider all elements of good practice in succession planning and enable you to develop a focused and realistic plan for the future. Facilitated by Heather Lomas, MDEM will provide a blend of intensive support to a cohort of museums.

The programme will start with an introductory session, followed by Introduction to Diversity and Inclusion workshop led by Inclusive Boards.

This will be followed by two online meetings of the cohort, focussing on key elements of succession planning. There will be additional one to one support available, access to a peer support network, provision of resources, links to additional information, plus a final peer support meeting in November 2022 to share learning from the programme.

This intensive support opportunity is available to six museums, who will be selected through a competitive expression of interest process.

Museums who highlighted succession planning as a priority in the Organisational Health Check 2020/21 are invited to apply.

This programme aims to:

- Support museums in developing plans for succession of trustees and boards
- Champion diversity and encourage museums to have a range of people represented on their boards
- Facilitate museums to develop effective plans and procedures for trustee recruitment.

- Provide museums with peer group meetings, one to one support, resources and signposting
